

Biography

José Luis Romero

Please note: This is not José Luis' introduction.

José Luis Romero is a consultant, corporate trainer, and professional speaker who works with organizations who want to build a truly sustainable competitive advantage – he assists executives develop their management and leadership skills through time-tested, effective, and universal best practices, to help them become outstanding leaders and boost organizational performance.

He presents actionable advice along with take-home skills, so the learning migrates from understanding to execution. The net result – participants leave his dynamic programs with a clear and simple but powerful structured process, so they can align their every day behaviors and decisions with the results that matter the most, in order to ignite peak performance.

Trained first as a Social Anthropologist Practitioner, and then as an Organizational Development Consultant, José Luis has worked over 20 years with hundreds of managers from organizations ranging from Fortune 500 size companies to enterprises with less than 50 employees in several industries.

His experience in multi-cultural environments (Canada, US, and Mexico) and fluency in French, English, and Spanish facilitate his work in multi-national engagements.

His next book: “The Naked Truth About Leadership: Skills that build high performance organizations” is about the most effective leadership skills with the greatest possible impact on organizational success.

He is a husband and father of two beautiful children, he loves swimming, biking, hiking, snowboarding, working-out without weights, and he is a movie aficionado.